Nikita Warns Any Future Cuba Crisis Will Be Tougher

MOSCOW (AP) - Soviet Premier Khrushchev, in a gay farewell to Fidel Castro, vowed Thursday night he will rebuff "delirious talk" about going to war to promote world communism.

The Soviet premier, speaking at a reception in the Kremlin's great hall after a Lenin Stadium rally for the Cuban prime minister, evidently aimed his remark at the Red Chinese.

Chinese insistence on a belligerent attitude toward the West is one of the roots of the current Moscow-Peking squabble, which will be considered at a Soviet-Chinese meeting in Moscow on July 5.

In an impromptu speech, Khrushchev said the idea that Communist world victory can come only through war violates Marxism-Leninism. He appeared to be laying down the Sovie' line for the July meeting.

Denies Political Trouble

Khrushchev was in a buoyant mood, even taking out time to scoff at Western reports that he is having political trouble in the Red camp. If you have the picture we want, we will pay you $500. Will you check? Old trunks, that packet of ancient pictures? Here are some facts to go on.

Lewis Hunter came to Cynthiana as a child. He had three brothers: one, William, died in 1849. Lewis and his wife Mariah had five children, of whom four were living in 1870. The 1860 Census assures us Lewis was "neither deaf, dumb, blind, insane, nor had fits"!

In 1861 his "Lewis Hunter Mill and Distillery" was a healthy venture, producing a barrel a day of good whiskey. Yet, in 1868, he sold out. We know very little of his early travels. We suspect he

If you think you know . . . if you have a picture of our Lewis Hunter . . . may we have it?

If it can be authenticated, we will pay you $500 for the right to put it on our bottle. Your liquor dealer has more information on Mr. Hunter; he'll be glad to hand it over. # Trade Hassle Develops At Geneva

The 50-nation meeting in Geneva of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) has been dubbed the "Kennedy round" because the conference was made possible by the Trade Expansion Act of 1962.

Under this law, upon which the White House depends to stimulate foreign business, the President has authority to reduce tariffs as much as 50 per cent if other GATT members can be persuaded to do the same.

It was widely contended that the trade act would open doors wide to American negotiators. But Christian A. Herter, Mr. Kennedy's special trade representative, seems to be having a little trouble in talking business with his foreign colleagues in Geneva. And this is merely a preliminary conference plot to guidelines for next year's actual bargaining.

In opening the conference, Switzerland's economics minister spoke of how unforgivable it would be to miss this "magnificent opportunity" to achieve a break-through in freer world trade. Europe's Common Market, however, appears to be willing to let the opportunity go by.

It was totally unresponsive to Mr. Herter's suggestion that underdeveloped nations be helped by dispensing with customs duties on tropical goods.

This is one of the lesser examples of the differences among the chief parties on key issues. The question is whether the negotiators have the desire to cut through the tougher questions.

Art Of Making A Coalition

When the Republicans finally face up to the task of piecing together an effective coalition for 1964, to what elements of the electorate can they make their

Looking over what might be called the demographical landscape, one can catch glimpses of many promising leads. The Republicans don't need to worry very much about the wide segment of the suburban vote that is tax conscious, inflation conscious, and tired to death of strikes. They will tend to hold their own here no matter what candidate they choose. On the other hand, they cannot hope to make much of a dent in certain traditional New Deal areas. Blue-collar labor will tend to the Democratic side; so will the so-called ethnic groups, with some exceptions.

Where the Republicans can make an appeal, however, is to the increasingly numerous people who have become disillusioned with their status as part of the old Rooseveltian coalitions. One big element here is the particular classification of labor that has moved out of the blue-collar class and into the white-collar groupings. Since 1947, the year before Harry Truman's astounding second term victory, white-collar employment has risen by 50 per cent as compared to a 17 per cent rise in over-all employment. Farm and blue-collar workers have actually declined since 1947 - but in fifteen years the number of white-collar workers has jumped by ten million.

What does a white-collar family earn? With the average American family's income now at $7,140 a year, according to Department of Commerce figures. it is a reasonable assumption that the white-collar people are practically all within shouting distance of the so-called "median" figure of $5,840, which is the Department of Commerce's estimate of what at least half the families in America are making.

Now, $5,840 a year pays a lot of taxes one way or another. Owing to thirty years of inflation this is not an affluent figure—and those who are earning between $5,000 and $6,000 are heartily sick of being checked off every pay-day for state and federal taxes, company deductions, and social security. This is why such Kennedy gimmicks as medicare, federal aid to education, and what - not, rouse no enthusiasm among the "masses." The new white-collar working class is tired of being checked off, period. If the correct pitches are made, this class should be widely responsive to Republican promises to stabilize the check-off business right where it is, or even to try to reduce it a little.

Then there are the old people who live on fixed incomes. Many of these people are grateful for what social security they have. But they have become intensely concerned with protecting the buying power of that security. They might like medicare, but not at the expense of more inflation. One way the Republicans might appeal to the old people is to insist that the separate states make federal medicare unnecessary by really doing something about the less costly Kerr-Mills legislation, which can be invoked to cover needy cases without adding to the social security bite. Though the connection between increased social security check-offs and inflation may seem obscure at first blush, the fact is that every time take-home pay is lessened it increases the pressure for higher over-all wages, which have to be financed out of a federal increase in the money supply. The old people don't stand to get their cut of new federal money, which is one reason they are now a deflationary bloc, interested in protecting the value of the money they already have.

There are many other blocs and interest groups to which the Republicans can turn for support. Item: the numerous non-extremist southerners who would like to solve the problems of race relations without being insulted with a force bill psychology in Washington. Item: the poorer farmers, who might be won by a promise of limiting support payments to wheat produced on a limited number of acres. # Khrushchev, McNamara Experience Similar Problems With Military

WASHINGTON-Observers who have come back from Moscow compare Premier Khrushchev's troubles with his Red Army generals as not unlike those Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara is having with U. S. admirals and military men.

The friction which led to the purge of Admiral George Anderson as chief of naval operations actually began last October during the Cuban crisis, when Anderson wanted to let each U. S. naval commander operate on his own in Cuban waters when it came to stopping Russian ships. President Kennedy and Secretary McNamara over-ruled him. They felt that the situation was too tense to let the fate of the United States rest in the hands of individual naval officers. One false move, they said, could plunge the world into war.

Admiral Anderson believed that his commanders were cool, levelheaded and well trained to meet emergencies; that they should not have to query Washington on every move, 1,000 miles away.

However, the White House and the Defense Department kept a minute-to-minute control over the tense Cuban blockade, as Russian vessels steamed toward Havana.

for believing that it was the Red Army that urged the placing of nuclear misiles in Cuba in the first place. But whether true or not, there is not doubt that Marshall Malinovsky, No. 1 power in the Red Army, was furious when Khrushchev removed them.

It was shortly after this that Malinovsky made the unusual criticism of Khrushchev's role at the battle of Stalingrad where he had served as civilian commissar and recently has been given chief credit for victory. Marshall Malinovsky, in a public statement, played down Khrushchev's role, said that the decisions of the Russian general staff had won the victory.

This was equivalent to a statement by the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff in Washington that John F. Kennedy was not much of a hero in the PT boat rescue in the South Pacific.

Shortly after this, Marshall Malinovsky went to Indonesia. While absent. Khrushchev removed Marshall Matvei Zakharov as chief of staff of the Red Army, replaced him with Marshall Sergei Biryuzov, a rocket expert, and a man closer to Khrshuchev's ideas against big land armies.

Admiral Anderson, a handsome, rough and ready sailor, was dropped shortly after his return from Navy League Conference in Puerto Rico where he had made a fairly innocuous speech on the importance of mutual trust between superior and inferior officers, but which was interpreted by some as the final straw in the feud between the military and the civilian leaders of the Penta-

There had been other irritating factors, such as differences between McNamara and the military over the TFX contract and the tendency of some admirals and generals to run up to Congress with private views in direct conflict with their civilian chiefs.

paign to make him a hero. They recall the manner in which President Truman disciplined Admirals Arthur Radford and Arleigh Burke when they went to Congress in an attempt to undermine another secretary of defense, Louis Johnson, for cutting defense spending by pruning big airplane carriers. Truman was irate at this undercutting of the civilian command. but President Eisenhower brought both Radford and Burke back to Washington and restored them as kingpins of the Navy.

The admirals hope to do the same for Admiral Anderson. Meanwhile the lobbying campaign in Congress is on.

Red Army And Missiles

Just how deep runs the Red Army battle against Khrushchev is hard to determine. Another top leader, General I. A. Serov, chief of military intelligence, has also been ousted. Significantly both Serov and Zakharov had been friends of the executed spy, Colonel Oleg Penkovsky.

Neither Serov nor Zakharov, as far as can be ascertained, were implicated in passing on military secrets to a foreign country. But they do appear to have been a part of the general military opposition to the Khrushchev soft line of accommodation with the United States and his belief that the Marxist doctrine of the inevitability of war between capitalism and Communism must be scrapped.

The Russian military have championed a big army and a big navy. Khrushchev has argued that both are out of date, that Russia must rely on long range missiles, that the military budget must be pruned in favor of agriculture, housing and industry.

McNamara and Kennedy have followed a somewhat similar line, have also clapped official censorship on statements by American admirals and generals regarding the probability of war. McNamara and Kennedy have decreed that war, when it shall be declared and how, is something for the civilian branch of the government to decree.

The Supreme Court And The 'Law Of The Land'

WASHINGTON - Who knows what the "law of the land" is with respect to Negro demonstrations and resultant disorders in Birmingham, Alabama, and other cities throughout the country?

Are state or city police forbidden to arrest anyone for inciting disorder as long as the purpose or objective is to demonstrate for a lawful cause?

These questions are touched upon in one way or another in a series of decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States which were handed down this week. But the opinions rendered do not clarify the issue. In most of the decisions, technicalities are intermingled with constitutional principle, and it is difficult to know where one begins and the other

Thus, the Supreme Court decided that in one city, which has an ordinance forbidding integration, it was lawful for sit-in demonstrators to demand service alongside of whites in restaurants. The decision said, in effect, that the proprietor was ordered by state law and didn't segregate lunch counters of his own free will.

In another city, where there was no state or city law requiring segregation, the Supreme Court held that statements made from time to time by public officials amounted to the same thing as a law. Hence, demonstrators were within their rights in pursuing their objectives and the restaurant owner was being "coerced" by city officials and was not acting of his own accord in maintaining segregated lunch counters.

These confusing interpretations were by no means unanimous. Justice Harlan, one of the most learned of the members of the Court, took issue with the other justices on the extent to which private rights may be invaded.

Most significant is the court's view that when a demonstration leads to violence and disorder, the demonstrators are not held to be at fault. Chief Justice WarBy David Lawrence ren said, with regard to one of the cases, that incitement to disorder may occur, but that those whose acts gave rise to the riots or disorders could not be punished. He

"But it is sufficient to say again that a generally worded statute, when construed to punish conduct which cannot be constitutionally punished, is unconstitutionally vague.

"And the possibility of disorder by others cannot justify exclusion of persons from a place if they otherwise have a Constitutional right - founded upon the equal protection clause-to be present." The mere fact that the police felt that demonstrations and riots might ensue was not sufficient ground for the police to arrest those who refused to obey their orders.

Incidentally, the Court's com-ment that the law cannot intervene until an actual disorder takes place is interesting in view of the recent action of the President of the United States in ordering troops to Alabama on the theory that there might be disorders. The power he claimed to send troops was based upon a threatened outbreak of violence. According to the new Supreme Court opinion, he presumably should not have issued such orders to mobilize troops until violence actually had

AD ASTRO?-Some officials in Washington have been concerned about commercialization of U.S. astronauts' exploits. They can get some relief from a recent advertisement that appeared in a Russian magazine. The ad depicted Soviet casmonaut Gherman Titov wearing a Russian-made wristwatch. The blurb said:

"Count down . . . 3, 2, 1—fire! At the launching pad headquarters all eyes are fixed on numerous watch dials as the booming count down resounds. Traveling in space together with Gherman Titov, this rugged watch showed the exact time through the most trying moments of overloads and weight-cently received a ballot asking him to vote for a new member of the Yale Corporation, the governing body of Yale University.

Surprised at first, Kennedy realized he was qualified by virtue of having received an honorary degree from the university last year. Along with the ballot came the standard questionnaire seeking facts and statistics on Yale alumni. Among other things, the questionnaire asked for the name of a person who would know his forwarding address if he moved from his present residence.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN? - The House of Representatives has just passed a bill to control the growth of feed grains. It is now being considered in the Senate. The bill runs about 2,200 words in length, and the Senate Agriculture Committee has put out a "short explanation" of the bill. The ex-

This week's Supreme Court decision makes it plain that Negroes who were playing basketball in a public park and who were themselves peaceable could not be legally arrested, and that the impact of the incident on those who opposed the use of public facilities by Negroes is not relevant.

In the South Carolina case, where the manager of a store refused to serve his Negro customers except at separate tables, the Court held that, since the city ordinance requiring segregation was not constitutional, any act based upon it by an individual wa also invalid.

In the Louisiana case, where there was no law requiring segregation, the Supreme Court took cognizance of the absence of such a statute. It ruled, however, that, because city officials had publicly denounced "sit-ins" and because the store managers conferred with those officials and the police when a demonstration in the of collaboration with city authorities. It was declared by the court that, in effect, the store was operating at the dictate of city officials.

The manager of the department store in question declared that he was maintaining segregated facilities in accordance with "state policy and practice" as well as local custom. From this, the Supreme Court majority drew the conclusion that the store officials were "coerced by the city." Chief Justice Warren said that "the state cannot achieve the same result by an official command which has at least as much coercive effect as an ordinance." There was no evidence that the state or city authorities had commanded the owner to maintain a segregated service. But the Supreme Court thought a mere statement by a city or state official concerning a publicly announced demonstration amounts to the same thing.

Lead poisoning is an occasional hazard to artists. The diagnosis is not always easy to make, especially when the victim is an amateur, painting for fun. The treatment of lead poisoning has changed in the last decade. Chelating agents are most useful in deleading the body. The remedy works quickly and with complete safety. The New Zealanders used calcium disodium versenate, which displaces the lead and allows the kidneys to excrete the poison. Chelation is a chemical process in which one ion is lifted out of a structure and replaced by another. In these cases, the lead ion was lifted out in exchange for the calcium ion in the chelating agent. The lead is thus made harmless and excreted by the kidneys.

Pittsburgh Pirates Trade Bob Skinner To Reds For Jerry Lynch

Buccos Obtain Highest Paid Pinch Hitter

Both Players Began Major Careers With Corsairs In 1954

PITTSBURGH (UPI) - The Pittsburgh Pirates, sorely in need of a long ball hitter and bench strength, Thursday traded veteran outfielder Bob Skinner to Cincinnati for Jerry Lynchoften referred to as the major leagues' most successful and highest paid pinch-hitter.

A Pirate spokesman here said it was a straight player swap with no cash involved.

Both Skinner and Lynch began their big time careers with the Pirates as rookies in 1954. Skinner, a 31-year-old lanky leftfielder, remained with the Pittsburgh elub since, but Lynch was traded to Cincinnati, where he built a reputation as one of the best pinchhitters in the game.

Lynch, 32, has a career total of 13 pinch-hit home runs, just one shy of the major league record held by big George Crowd who played for the old Boston Braves, Milwaukee, Cincinnati and St. Louis in the National League.

This season with the Reds, Lynch appeared in 22 games, mostly in pinch-hitting roles. As a pinch-hitter he collected three hits in 13 at bats, including two

Charges He Was Defamed By Look

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) Charging he was "defamed," first aseman Orlando Cepeda of the San Francisco Giants filed a $1,-000,000 libel suit against Look magazine Thursday.

The suit, filed in Superior Court by attorney Marvin Lewis, asks for $500,000 general damages and $500,000 as exemplary or punitive damages.

"The article portrays Cepeda as fealous of Mays and, in effect, attacks his character and temperament by saying Horace Stoneham and the Giants feel this way about him," said Lewis. "This, in fact, is not true."

The article, written by Look sports editor Tim Cohane, also said that Cepeda was not a good

When the story first came out, Giants' manager Alvin Dark took a look at it and commented that he "didn't think much of it."

"As a result of the story," said Lewis, "Cepeda doesn't know what kind of a contract he's going to lose."

Cepeda currently is being paid approximately $48,000 after a long holdout seige. The Giants had wanted to cut his salary, but he finally succeeded in getting what was reputed to be a token salary raise of $1,000 from last year. He batted .306 last season.

He is the second-highest salaried player on the team — behind Mays' $100,000.

But in batting this year he is leading the team with a .318 average against Mays' .260.

A's Send Tartabul, Jiminez To Minors

NEW YORK (UPI)—Outfielders Manny Jimenez, who at this time last year was batting .383, and Jose Tartabull, another of the Kansas City Athletics' top hitters last season, Thursday were optioned to Portland of the Pacific Coast League.

To replace them, the Athletics recalled outfielders Hector Martinez and John Wojcik from the same club. Martinez, 23, batted .336 while Wojcik, 21, hit .304 this year at Portland.

Jimenez, who led the American League in batting for most of last season but tailed off to a .301 average, had only a .235 mark in 24 games this season. Tartabull, who hit .277 last year and is regarded as one of the fastest players in the major leagues, batted only .203 in 30 games in 1963.

CLEANED OUT-Outfielder Jim Piersall, sold by the Washington Senators to the New York Mets, cleans out his locker at the District of Columbia Stadium. The deal apparently was tied in with the Mets releasing Gil Hodges, veteran first baseman, who is the new Washington manager.

Piersall came to the Senators from Cleveland in 1961.
